James Negus worked tirelessly to record philatelic matters of interest to him and to share it with the wider philatelic community. He was a most methodical person and the work before you now is the result of his diligent research.

The original data was stored on an electronic database that he had compiled and when Jim decided to fully withdraw from the hobby of philately towards the end of his life, he supplied Glenn Morgan with a disk containing his research.

It will be noted that he included material from the Philatelic Congress of Great Britain (PCGB) and that a conscious decision had been made by your authors not to document these annual events in volume one. The PCGB data contained here will therefore be a most useful source of information for those who collect the many souvenirs.

Extensive listings of postcards, postal stationery, special handstamps and souvenir covers from all manner of postal and philatelic events held in Great Britain down the years will be of equal value to collectors.

Jim generously waived his copyright on this souvenir mail research, enabling it to be included here.
